Dear Sir: — I feel very much worried about the examination as I do not think I could write a better paper if I did write it again. I have gone over the work to the best of my ability, and am at a loss to do more. Besides from a financial standpoint, I am not able to pay another ten dollars. I have already paid twenty-five and that is all I can afford. It hardly seems worth while to serve your country in

Dear Miss Biles:

I have just received your letter concerning your examination in which I am very sorry you have come short of your expectations. I am asking the Registrar to look into the matter as carefully as possible and after I have had information in regard to the matter I will write you.

With kind regards, I am,

Yours sincerely,

President.

President Falconer
Dear Sir:-

At the recent Examinations held in April last I was a candidate writing my fourth year papers in General Course. When the results were announced I had failed in Political Economy, having passed in every other subject and taken second class honors in two subjects. I was very much surprised and perplexed as I considered my paper in Political Economy a good one. Mr Jackman, the examiner was out of town when the results were issued, and Professor Mavor told me it would be impossible to have my paper reread without special consent. I feel my paper is entitled to a pass mark and think you are the proper person to consult as to the council re-reading it.

I don't want to re write the paper without knowing that the matter has been carefully investigated. My pseudonym was "Across"
if it should be required Thanking you in anticipation

Miss E. Gwendolyn Miles,

1 Cawthra Square,

Toronto.

Dear Miss Miles:

I am directed by Sir Robert Falconer to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 25th inst. and to say that on inquiry he finds that your paper was re-read before the results of the final year were published, and that your marks were so low nothing could be done by the Revising Committee for you. In these circumstances it would be impossible to have the paper re-read a second time.

Yours very truly,

President's Secretar
